The safety and security of our schools is important to everyone. Whether one is a student, parent, teacher, staff member, board member, local official, or emergency responder, an incident that occurs at any school – whether urban or rural – will have a major impact on the entire community. Crisis Management for School-Based Incidents – Partnering Rural Law Enforcement and the Local School Systems is an eight-hour course designed to educate rural law enforcement personnel as well as school administrators and staff on the elements that would allow for an effective response to school-based emergencies. Schools in small, rural, and remote areas across the country account for almost 23% of the total student population (more than 11 million students). Rural schools, law enforcement, and other emergency responders are often limited in resources, so it is imperative that all potentially affected parties collaborate on planning, preparing, communicating, responding, and recovering from a school-based incident. Through this course, rural law enforcement officials receive information and training tools that may be used when working with their local school systems. As a result of the training, law enforcement, superintendents, principals, school resource officers and others within the school system will be better prepared to work collaboratively when a crisis occurs. Topics to be discussed are vulnerability assessments, threat assessment management, parent reunification and incident defusing and debriefing.
Upon completion of this course, the student should be able to:

1. Students will be able to articulate the course purpose, goals and objectives, summarize how law enforcement personnel and school staff need to work collaboratively to prepare for and respond to school-based crisis events.
2. Students will attain recognizable skills and terminology relevant to school emergency planning and can describe some basic security and safety risks found in schools.
3. Students will be able to identify many of the different types of threats to schools and the levels of motivation by potential perpetrators, capabilities, and modes of operation.
4. Students will be able to identify and distinguish various response protocols used by schools and law enforcement as well as describe some of the devices used to instigate a school emergency incident.
5. Students will be able to explain the basic law enforcement expectations of the school and rural law enforcement will be able to explain the roles and responsibilities of their school partners regarding incident recovery to efficiently and effectively return the school and community to normal operations while maintaining a high-level of safety and accountability.
6. Students will be able to identify additional training tools and resources to reference after the training is complete regarding the partnering of rural law enforcement and school personnel in school-based incident response, recovery and prevention.

This course is designed to meet requirements as mandated by the Maryland Police and Correctional Training Commissions and to meet the annual in-service requirements.
